■ Australian maker of recycled cardboard eyes S.I.P. along with other California sites

By Steve Marschke

An Australian manufacturer of recycled cardboard is considering West Sacramento's Southport Industrial Park as a possible new site for a plant, the city's redevelopment director confirmed yesterday. The company is looking at several other possible locations as well.

The company, Melbourne-based Pratt Industries, does business as Visy Paper Ltd.

"They're looking at a handful of sites," said Val Toppenberg, West Sacramento Redevelopment Agency Director. "They're looking at Southport, Stockton, San Francisco, Fontana (in the San Bernardino area) and Vallejo."

MacMillan Bloedel, Ltd., of Canada, announced earlier this year that it was abandoning a multi-year effort to bring a newspaper recycling plant to the same site in the industrial park, which is owned by a partnership including West Sacramento resident Frank Ramos.

MacMillan Bloedel spent several million dollars in the effort to line up permits for the proposed $1 billion plant. Those permits are probably transferrable to a similar industry at the site, said Toppenberg.

The Canadian company (which had been partners in the project with the German firm Haindl Papier) announced that low newsprint prices were the main cause for cancelling the project in West Sacramento. Also problematic was the company's plans to discharge wastes into the Sacramento River-- a plan which drew concern from environmentalists and downstream water users from the Bay Area and even the Los Angeles area.

Toppenberg said that the smaller ($150 million) size of the cardboard plant, as well as the less-particular nature of its product might help the cardboard manufacturer succeed where the newsprint manufacturer failed.

"One of the pluses of this company is that they're making cardboard," he explained. "Because of the texture and quality, they don't have to discharge salts (into the river). They can leave it in the product."

Production of recycled cardboard would presumably pose less of a threat to the Sacramento River than the now-abandoned MacBlo recycling project

Other river quality concerns raised during the planning for the MacMillan Bloedel plant included the facility's possible thermal pollution and its release of mercury, heavy metals and other solids. The plant was considering the construction of a cutting edge "closed loop" system to recycle all of its water, and avoid any discharge into the river, when the project was cancelled.

Toppenberg said his agency is in the process of sharing information with Visy Paper, and the company has not yet filed for

Successful summer for library

■ Summer programs draw over 1,000 visits from area kids and local library looks forward to hosting the city's second and fifth grade visitors starting today

By Steve Marschke

West Sacramento's library doesn't have a librarian. But other than that, things are going pretty darn well, according to two top staffers at the site.

Longtime former librarian Jay Johnstone left the post at the Arthur F. Turner Branch at 1212 Merkley Ave. in December to accept a job at the county's larger branch in Davis. Replacement Linda Shoemake signed on in May as Johnstone's replacement, but then had a better offer come through and left this month for a post at American River College.

Elise McCallan, a library assistant at the branch, is the acting head until the county straightens away some salary issues and pursues a long term replacement librarian for the branch.

In the mean time, the branch's activities go on.

Summer programs for the kids were the most successful in several years, reports Cathy Lorda, who oversees children's programs at Turner branch.

"We had a wonderful summer," Lorda commented. "Everything we did was the same as in previous years, including going to different schools to promote our programs. But for some reason the summer programs were more popular than in several years."

All told, the programs drew an attendance of over 1,000, Lorda said. That included 23 preschool storytime sessions (with two per week in English and one in Spanish), and excellent attendance in the "Reading Club."

ELISE McCALLAN and CATHY LORDA are all smiles as they await visits from this year's students

"We had over 500 children sign up for the reading club," Lorda commented. "They signed up and set goals for themselves for reading, and if they met those goals, they got rewards."

Prizes included a folder filled with notepaper and a coupon for a free small pizza from Round Table.

There was also a reading contest over the summer, won by eight year old Anthony Molina. The boy received a $20 certificate from Tower Books for his efforts, courtesy of the East Yolo Friends of the Library support group.

McCallan said the library will continue to try to increase the number of card-holders in coming months, and is always interested in signing up new patrons for a library card.

Among other things, the number of card-holders is counted when funding time comes around, and having more borrowers will help the branch's financial picture.

Bargain hunters may wish to check out the branch's magazine sale section (10 cents for most issues), and might want to mark their calendars for the weekend of Sept. 28-29, when the East Yolo Friends of the Library sponsors its next book sale at the library. Proceeds from magazine and book sales benefit library programs.

More imminent are annual visits from area classrooms, scheduled to begin today. Washington Unified School District follows the practice of bringing every single second and fifth grade class to the library for a visit at least once every year. Some come by bus, while other classes from nearby schools may be seen marching to or from the library with teachers and teacher's aides.

"Some of them come more often (than once a year)," said McCallan. "There are a couple of teachers just like clockwork, who bring their students every three weeks, and I think the kids benefit from it. Last year, we gave each child a National Geographic, since we had a surplus donated, and that went over very well."

Also on the calendar for coming months:

■ Oct. 9 at 10:30 and Oct. 10 at 7 p.m., preschool storytime will be held for 3 to 5 year olds.

■ Thursday, Oct. 24 (just before Halloween), the library will host a scary story time and face painting at 7 p.m. All are welcome.

■ Thurs., Nov. 21 at 7 p.m., magician and puppeteer Jim Jayes will be on hand to entertain school age kids.

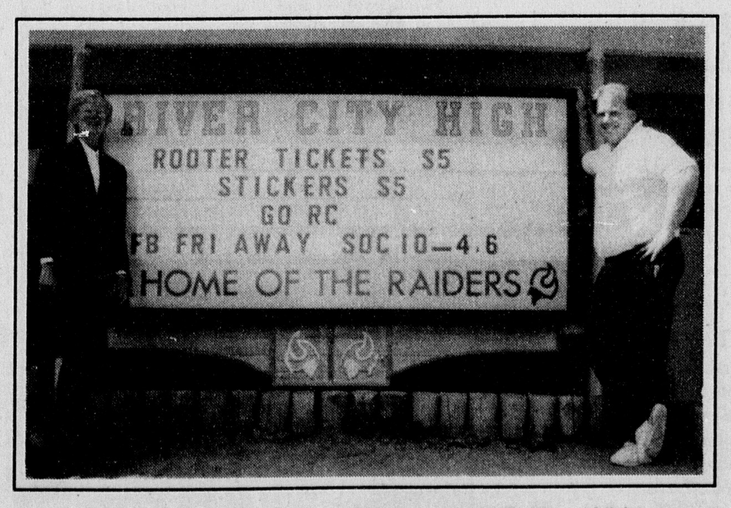
'Continuing progress' at River City, say high school administrators

RCHS ready to open school doors to the Class of 2000

The United States Department of Education is estimating that public school enrollment will hit an all-time high this fall. The school-age children of baby-boom parents, an overall improvement in school attendance, and the rising birthrates of minorities are among the factors which will stretch all public schools -- especially those in California -- to their limits. But here in West Sacramento, with schools scheduled to open on Tuesday, September 3, the spirits of administrators, teachers, and students alike have never been higher. River City High School is a good case in point.

Dr. Donna White, the principal at River City High School, told the News-Ledger that "although we currently have 1,280 students enrolled in a facility which was originally designed to accommodate only about 950, I have never been more excited about the beginning of a school year. We just finished our freshman class orientation and believe me, the Class of 2000 is excited and eager to get going. Winning the California Distinguished School Award last year was quite an honor for our students and staff, and I think it has helped to energize everyone on campus."

When asked to comment on how she plans to keep all the positive momentum at the high school going, Dr. White said, "You can never rest on your laurels in this business. There's always so much to do, so many new challenges, and we have quite a number of them this year. For instance, we want to improve the reading skills of our students, especially those who are just beginning their high school experience, and we are really going to emphasize teacher training in that area. We also want to upgrade our students exposure to the latest advances in technology, and in an effort to do that, all three of our computer labs will be on-line this year, as well as the library and the career center. We want our students to be able to do as much purposeful research on the internet as possible. I should also mention that (schools superintendent) Dr. Miller and the Board of Education has made it possible for us to hire a much needed assistant principal who will allow us to work a lot harder at helping our at-risk students. Having that extra person on the staff will make it possible for us to personalize our services and be much more pro-active, instead of reactive. We have also hired five new teachers, and I think they're going to be a great addition to an already excellent and very dedicated staff."



River City principal Dr. Donna White and V.P. Ken Whittemore

Ken Whittemore, River City's veteran vice principal shares White's enthusiasm for the coming year. "I think last year laid a solid foundation for even bigger and better things to come and we want our students to build on their successes and keep their expectations high," said Whittemore.

Whittemore also pointed out some of the facility improvements which were made over the summer. "We re-paved the tennis courts, the basketball courts, and the parking lot. We also painted five more classrooms and did extensive work on

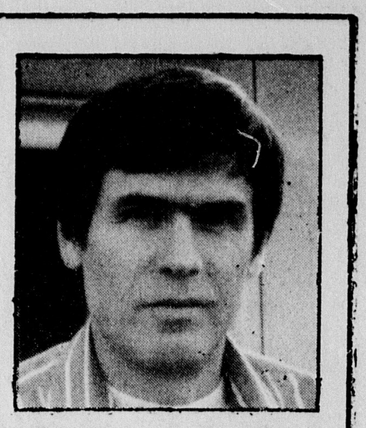
O'Leary boat to be moved

State officials are waiting for a court injunction, which they hope to obtain at a hearing Friday, for legal authority to remove an abandoned 80-foot boat near the site of construction for West Sacramento's Money Store project.

The boat drifted ashore on a small piece of state-owned land earlier this month after being piloted from a Sacramento berth by area resident James O'Leary. O'Leary faces two navigation-related misdemeanor charges over the incident.

The boat sits on its side on the western bank of the Sacramento River north of the Tower Bridge.

Bill Clinton vs. Bob Dole is just politics as usual



By Daryl Fisher

With the Republican National Convention over and the Democratic National Convention now into its third day, presidential politics is officially in full swing -- and it's enough to make just about any voter with a brain in his or her head barf.

First, the "big tent" Republicans. Their delegates gathered in San Diego a few weeks ago and immediately went to work on erasing the mean-spirited image which Pat Buchanan and others had left behind in Houston in 1992. To accomplish this rather daunting task, the leaders of the Party spent four days and nights parading anyone who could possibly pass for a Moderate Republican (women and minorities were in especially high demand) up to the podium to make a prime time speech. What was left unsaid, however, was the fact that the Colin Powell's and Susan Molinari's of the Republican Party actually have no say what-so-ever in the uncompromising far-right legislative agenda which is at the heart of the conservative movement. The truth of the matter (which can be found in the GOP Platform) is that what was once the `Reaganite Party' of growth and optimism is now dominated by religious zealots and right-wing ideologues who are absolutely convinced that only they are wise enough and moral enough to govern America.

As I watched the Republican Convention (it was more of an infomercial actually) I could hardly believe my eyes. There was Bob Dole, a life-long advocate of a balanced budget suddenly calling for a 15%, $560,000,000 across the board tax cut which he knows he can't pay for unless he makes deep cuts in programs he swears he won't touch; and Jack Kemp, switching his much respected and long held positions on illegal immigration and affirmative action just so he can be viewed as a good team player; and maybe worst of all, Elizabeth Dole (who is every bit as much a political animal as Hillary Clinton, the woman so many Republican men love to hate) doing a polished yet still nauseating Oprah Winfrey imitation which no doubt had most of our past First Ladies turning over in their graves.

And now to the Democrats. President Clinton spent much of last week in the peaceful surroundings of the Rose Garden with as many journalists and TV news crews as his people could round up, signing bill after bill into law in an effort to further craft his self-styled image as America's first New Democrat. To that end, he shamelessly put his name on a Welfare "reform" package which cuts off the federal guarantee of cash assistance to poor children, a guarantee created by a real Democrat, FDR. "The premise of this legislation," said Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan of New York, considered by many to be one of the few independent thinking lawmakers in high office, "is that the behavior of certain adults can be changed by making the lives of their children as wretched as possible." But the fact that a million or more children will soon be thrown into the bowels of poverty doesn't seem to carry much weight with Bill Clinton in an election year. He seems to have a sixth sense for which way the wind blows, and he apparently has no problem with compelling the less fortunate in our society to take their chances with state legislators throughout the country, all of whom know the poor rarely take the time to vote. "He seems to like being president more than he likes being president in order to carry out any set of principles or policies," said Robert Kuttner of the Washington Post. So, much as the Republicans spent their four days in convention hiding the fact that their party is now controlled by intolerant religious conservatives, Democrats are now busy doing everything in their power to conceal an even uglier truth -- that their candidate for president of the United States isn't really a Democrat at all.

Anyway, it seems to me that the goal of both Party conventions has been to make them as dull and predictable as possible. Although this has offended the sensibilities of countless viewers, not to mention thousands of political journalists and broadcasters who remember what real conventions used to be like, it is considered by most political pros to be a much safer way of doing business than actually telling the American people the truth. It's almost as if all our major politicians think the same way Jack Nicholson did when he yelled out at Tom Cruise, "You can't handle the truth!"

But they could be wrong. Americans aren't stupid. We know that Bob Dole can't give us all a 15% tax cut without blowing a huge hole in the nation's budget; we know Bill Clinton isn't really a New Democrat, but rather just another opportunist who will do or say just about anything to get himself re-elected; we even know that Ross Perot is a nut.

Unfortunately, there is one thing we don't know. We don't know why our political system suddenly seems so incapable of producing real leaders. Men and women of courage, conviction and vision, who will look us in the eye, tell us the truth, explain what needs to be done, challenge us to carry our fair share of the load, and then demand that we get on with it.

I don't know about you, but I'm getting pretty tired of voting for the guy least likely to screw things up even worse than they already are.

The Sports Insider

By Richard Novoa

The 1996/97 NFL season starts this Labor Day weekend with the 49ers hosting the New Orleans Saints at 1 p.m. (Ch. 40) at 3 Com Park.

The 49ers' newly acquired running back Terry Kirby sprained his ankle and is listed as questionable for the home opener. Derek Loville keeps his starting halfback position and Tommy Vardell will start as fullback. Look for Steve Young to open up the Niners' attack by throwing to Rice, Stokes, Jones and new wide receiver Terrell Owens.

The Saints always play the Niners close! 49ers 28, Saints 19.

The Oakland Raiders will open up their season on Sunday (10 a.m., Ch. 3) before a wild and enthusiastic crowd in Baltimore, as the Ravens (formerly the Cleveland Browns) begin a new era of football for the people of Maryland.

The Raiders travel to Baltimore as one-point favorites in a game where their starting QB Jeff Hostetler is out with a sore knee. Back-up QB Billy Joe Hobert will start.

The Raiders shook up their receiving staff by trading the "Rocket" Ismail to Carolina for a future draft pick! Sounds like the "Rocket" was a dud!!

The Raiders coaching staff didn't like his work habits, attitude or the money they paid him to just run up and down the field. James "Stone Hands" Jett moves to starting wide receiver, but look for Daryl Hobbs or free agent walk-on Kenny Shedd to replace him by the second game of the season.

Raiders 31, Ravens 28.

The Super Bowl champion Dallas Cowboys open up the season on Monday Night Football, as two point favorites in Chicago against the Bears. Look for the first upset of the season as ex-Dallas coach Dave Wannstedt figures out how to stop Emmitt Smith and force the Cowboys to pass!

Chicago 24, Dallas 23.

The baseball season is over for Bay Area fans, as the Giants fell to 15 games back of San Diego and the A's are trailing Texas by 13 games. It's wait until next year!

See ya next week!!

The van is used daily by people with disabilities in five Easter Seal programs for community integration, taking clients to jobs including delivering the Sacramento News & Review, teaching individuals how to access community recourses and recreational outings.

"Without the help of Century 21, many of our clients would not be able to access the community with such freedom," says Terry Colborn, director of special programs.

Easter Seals provides much needed services to people with disabilities, offering programs and leadership to help these individuals reach their highest level of emotional, physical and social functioning, thereby facilitating maximum independence. Services include: physical and occupancy therapy, social services, therapeutic pool and special day programs.

West Sacramento Auxiliary to Post No. 8762
Veterans of Foreign Wars of the U.S.

The Veterans of Foreign Wars of West Sacramento and its Auxiliary Post 8762 received first place award for its "Buddy Poppy Display" from the State of California Department VFW. The contest rules were; make a display celebrating our freedom in 1776; it had to be made entirely of Buddy Poppies, that disabled veterans made in the V.A. hospitals. The poppies are bought by the post...The Auxiliary chairperson decided the "Torch of Freedom" held by "Statue of Liberty" that the people of France sent to us in 1876 to celebrate our hundredth year of "Freedom." It has 897 poppies, the stand is red poppies with hand holding base with white poppies, the Torch to the white ring holding the flame is solid red poppies, the flame is iridescent plastic paper giving it the affect of a flame burning, Our American Flag and the flags of all the military (Army, Navy, Marines, Air Force and Coast Guard) representing all veterans who gave themselves to fight for our "Freedom." It is now in Louisville, Kentucky representing our local and State of California for competition, at the V.F.W. National Convention. The credit for this magnificent achievement goes to Sue McMillan, Beverly Carson, Her mother and spouse. Sue is the chairperson Beverly is co-chairperson.

FLASH, CHARLIE...IN THOSE COSTUMES, YOU LOOK LIKE THE SCHLAGER BROTHERS.
WHEN WE PERFORMED HERE BEFORE, THEY WERE NEVER ASKED TO REMOVE THEIR MASKS.
MAYBE THINGS HAVE CHANGED HERE.
MING'S POLICE ARE GIVIN' EVERYBODY A REAL CLOSE LOOK.
IF WE'RE FORCED TO UNMASK, WE'LL HAVE TO USE PLAN "B".
ON THE PLANET DRAKAR, MING'S POLICE ORDER EVERYONE OFF CIRCUS MARKO'S SHIP...
I HOPE THAT WON'T BE NECESSARY.
WE'D BETTER GO; THEY WANT EVERYBODY OFF THE SHIP.
WATCH WHAT YOU SAY ON THE PLANET; MING HAS BUGS, WATCHERS AND LIP READERS EVERYWHERE.
SHORTLY...
YOU TWO!...TAKE OFF THOSE MASKS!
THE SCHLAGER BROTHERS NEVER UNMASK IN PUBLIC.
DO IT...OR DIE WHERE YOU STAND!
OKAY, OKAY...WE'LL TAKE THE MASKS OFF.

OPINION

News-Ledger Editorial

It's public information, isn't it?

State Senator Quentin Kopp of San Francisco is sponsoring a bill to require that campaign candidates put their financial records "on line," so that anyone with a computer and a modem can find out who is supporting these candidates' campaigns.

This information is already available at county and city headquarters. But not all citizens are able to make it to these offices during working hours to spend enough time to sift through these important documents. For this reason, Kopp's bill is good.

But because a lot of politicians don't want these public records to become too public, it faces rough going.

Opponents are making the argument that making this information accessible by computer opens the door for harassment of campaign donors. This is largely a smokescreen.

The phrase "follow the money" illustrates why voters need to be informed on who is financing different campaigns. If you know who is behind a certain candidate or ballot measure, you can better understand just what that person or ballot measure intends to do.

For this reason, the information should be as public as possible. With today's easy access to on-line technology, there's no excuse for not putting it there.

Another abuse that ought to be prohibited is the acceptance of campaign donations at the last minute -- a practice which allows a candidate or ballot money to take late contributions, use them for a campaign, but legally wait until after the election is over to disclose to the public who paid for them.

West Sacramento saw this in 1990 to the tune of thousands of dollars of out-of-town corporate money flowing into a self-proclaimed "grassroots" campaign on a local issue. Legally, that campaign didn't have to report the money until after it was too late to be meaningful. So it didn't.

But that doesn't make it right.

If we truly want a more responsive government, whether on the local, state or federal level, we've got to fix the part of it which revolves around money, donations and gifts.

Transit director responds:

New bill won't create new layer of government —

From Terry Bassett
Executive Director
Yolo County Transit Authority

In recent weeks, a lot of misinformation has been circulated about the proposed Transportation District for Yolo County. The misinformation does a disservice to the residents of this county, who need to see the full picture. I will leave it to you to judge, but the misstatements need to be corrected, because some things being attributed to the district and its supporters are simply not true now, nor have they ever been true.

First, as has been pointed out several times previously, this will be a transportation district, not a transit district. Transit is only one piece of the puzzle when you are talking about moving people, freight and information. I suppose it is easy to assume that because the Transit Authority sponsored the Hannigan bill, AB 2420, that the real agenda must be transit, but this tells me that some either didn't read or understand the legislation. That line of reasoning also totally ignores and trivializes all the hard-working people who came from the public works (roads) and community development departments, the elected officials, rail, pedestrian/bike advocates and others from Caltrans, the air district and the regional council who helped put together the Task Force to study all the transportation issues in Yolo County, and who subsequently helped write the legislation.

These are not "transit groupies," these are Yolo County residents and people involved with the whole transportation system, who want to help us take action now, while we can, to make sure the quality of life and economic development we all enjoy will continue. These people looked around three years ago and saw a very successful agency, the Transit Authority, whose energy and ability to form partnerships and move projects they wanted to engage on behalf of other transportation modes, especially streets and roads. We all know how important the road system to an ag-production county like Yolo, and how important mobility is to the many people who commute to work, school, shopping, etc., within, and without, of the county daily.

A lot of scary things have been printed about the district: that it will impose a tax (can't do it without a majority of the member jurisdictions supporting it and then your vote, and a 2/3 majority at that), that if there were a tax it would operate the district and be sucked up by administration (also not true, the revenues go back to the local governments to build projects within your cities and the county), that it will be another layer of government (not true since the old agency goes away when the new district is formed), that it will cost jobs in the public works departments (really absurd when you consider that the public works departments are most likely to benefit from new revenues the district generates), that it will be a separate power center (you can see through this one when you understand that the district board is composed of your elected officials from the city councils and the Board of Supervisors,

Clean it up!

The Harbor Blvd. landscaping is nice, but why didn't they clean up the intersection of Reed and Harbor? Clean up the debris left and erect some guard rails with reflectors?? Bet Channel 13 would appreciate it.
MRS. M. HOCK
West Sacramento

Thanks, rescuers

While riding her bicycle August 14 on Jefferson Blvd. between Higgins and Linden, West Sacramento teenager Shawne Marie Morgan was struck head-on by an on-coming pick-up truck at 7:15 p.m.

Driving directly behind the pick-up was West Sacramento resident Rich Hanson, whose quick thinking used his cell phone and summoned the Emergency Medical Services of this city. Fortunately, Mr. Hanson did not end his involvement there. The 911 caller remained on the scene administering comfort and support to the injured girl until the men of the Fire Station Number 42 -- Cpt. Carr, Eng. Redmon and Firefighter Zehnder, as well as Eng. Beckwith of Fire Station Number 41 -- arrived on the accident scene. Upon their arrival to the scene they carefully assessed the girl's conditions and began administering medical aid to her wounds. Moments later the rescuers were joined by the personnel of American Medical Response Ambulance Team of EMT-Paramedic Jill Sprague and Shelley Smith. This will trained and highly qualified team acted quickly, attending to Morgan's every injury, being careful to minimize any possible risk to her life. Ms. Morgan was then transported to UCD-MC Trauma Unit for further care. Ms. Morgan, after many test and multiple x-rays including a CT-Scan of her head was released the following morning with a fractured (broken) right forearm, 14 sutures to the right calf and lots of bruises and scrapes also to the right side of her body.

This 15-year-old victim probably would have lost her life that day, if it had not been for two very important facts. First, the quick entry into the EMS by Mr. Rich hanson and the fine efforts of the West Sacramento Fire Department and skill of AMR Paramedics. Secondly, and most importantly, the simple fact that this young lady was not embarrassed and did take a few extra moments to put on and properly wear her Bicycle Safety Helmet. This simple and inexpensive (less than $50) item is what kept Shawne Marie Morgan out of a wheelchair for the rest of her life. Perhaps worse, out of the lives of her family and friends.

In closing, I again want to thank the actions of those professionals named above for performing their duty without any hesitation, and, do all too often without the proper acknowledgement. I also want to phrase Mr. Rich Hanson for "getting involved" and not being "afraid of catching something." Thank you all!

'Order of the Louse' featured on local radio

From Veterans Information Network
West Sacramento

The "Military Order of the Louse," a fun-oriented honor degree of the national veterans network, will be the featured topic today on the weekly Veterans Radio Network program, "Freedom is Not Free!"

The Military Order of the Louse is one of several dedicated but irreverent community organizations in a national network dedicated to support all American ideals and aggressive fundraising in support of hospitalized veterans; and specifically sponsors annual scholarships to second year nursing students.

The M.O.L. has enjoyed a proud history here in West Sacramento. Many national and regional officers have advanced from West Sacramento, because of the many successes they have directed over their many years of service. The M.O.L. is quite unique among honor degrees in the veterans community and has enjoyed a proud history in our community.

The "Freedom is Not Free!" radio program is broadcast live every Wednesday from 1 to 2 p.m. on local radio station K.J.A.Y., 1430 on the A.M. radio dial. An effort is underway to locate additional sponsors in order to expand the weekly program by another hour. "Freedom is Not Free!" reports on issues affecting veterans and their families.

Senior counselors needed

Senior Peer Counseling of Yolo County, now in its ninth year, is looking for warm, caring persons, 55 years of age or older, who are interested in helping their peers manage through troubled times.

A course beginning on Wednesday, September 25, will train new volunteers for the program. Volunteers will receive 55 hours of training from a mental health professional before they begin counseling. They are not required to have any previous training or experience.

Peer counseling offers senior volunteers the opportunity to make a major difference in the life of another.

The volunteers combine counseling skills with life experiences to help their peers sort through difficulties and develop a positive approach to dealing with their situations.

Call Linda Cook at 375-6350 for more information.

local permits. The firm would most likely have to go through a conditional use permit process to make sure local permits obtained by MacMillan Bloedel are transferrable to the cardboard manufacturer's plant. If it pursues the West Sacramento site, it may also have to make its case before local air quality officials and water quality regulators.

As part of the agreement with Southport Industrial Park and MacMillan Bloedel, the West Sacramento assured that local permits and development rights would be transferrable to a user similar to MacMillan Bloedel.

Southport Industrial Park is a 670-acre parcel located to the west of the Port of Sacramento's property on the south side of the port's shipping channel. It is located northwest of Summerfield Drive in Southport, the city's southern half.

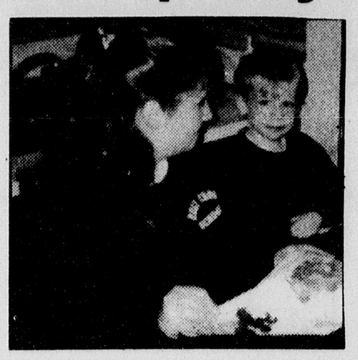
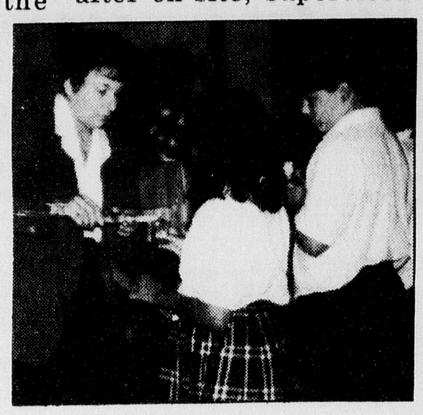
Holy Cross School stresses quality academics

Holy Cross School, a parochial school serving West Sacramento, offers students a quality Catholic education for the elementary grades K-8. The school is fully-accredited by the Western Catholic Educational Association and the Western Association of School and Colleges.

A hot lunch program is also available to all students. In addition, the school offers before and after on-site, supervised school care to facilitate working parents.





We can do this through the support of our parish community and commitment of our school staff. Find out how you can make the best educational choice for your child and be surprised at its affordability. Think 'green' when shopping for kids' back-to-school stuff

By Denise Kotko
Recycling Coordinator
City of West Sacramento

It is the time of year students and parents begin the annual search for the hottest fads in school supplies and outfits. Start a new trend this year and think...Old! Notebooks and paper supplies made from recycled papers, rules and binders from recycled plastics and refillable pens and pencils. Thermoses can replace disposable juice packs. Canvas lunch bags and plastic pails can fill in for paper bags. The new look in clothes can be old too! Look for those trendy 60s clothes in your local thrift store. Parents will find these new styles very appealing to the environment.

The "buy-recycled" trend is promoted by the City of West Sacramento as the environmentally-smart way for parents to help their kids start the school year. When customers buy products made from recycled materials they help keep our community recycling programs going. Recycling collection programs sell materials to manufacturers who use them to make new products. By closing the loop in the recycling process, we can help assure a market for our materials.

Fortunately, parents will not have to look far to find school supplies made with recycled materials. Local stores in West Sacramento carry many items made from recycled materials.

For information on available products in West Sacramento stores, contact the recycling division of the City of West Sacramento at 373-5893.

state incentive funding to reduce class size to 20 students in grades K-3 is great. For a variety of reasons our district immediately implemented the class size reduction program only in first grade. Though I think there may be some challenges in implementing the class size reduction for our 2nd and 3rd grade students during the coming school year such as a lack of qualified teachers or scarcity of classroom space, it probably is something that we all ought to examine in greater detail than we have thus far before giving up on the idea.

State funding is available for this year as the district would begin the program prior to February, 1997. There is justifiable interest among the Board as evidenced by questions from several individual trustees when the recommendation to start the first grade class size reduction was presented. I feel confident that there is also interest among teachers and parents to begin the class size reduction program from our 2nd and 3rd graders as soon as possible.

Space is always at a premium at a school site, but there might be some creative ways to use multi-use rooms, school libraries or other space on a shared, temporary basis until the portable classroom manufacturers catch up with demand. Sharing classrooms or even double sessions could be considered, though both have obvious disadvantages on even a temporary basis.

Probably the teacher shortage will only become more acute as time passes and other districts hire additional teachers to implement their programs. I am confident that by working together with our Washington Teachers Association and local Teacher Training Institutions, we could find ways to recruit, train and hire additional competent teachers from a variety of sources. For example, there may be February graduates from teacher credential programs that we could recruit now. There may be students currently enrolled in teacher training programs that are close to program completion who might be interested in doing some kind of internship.

There is probably teachers from outside of California who meet all the experience and education requirements already who may be willing to relocate to our area. I'm sure there are other creative ideas that we may collectively have to address this dilemma. I think it would be a good plan for all the intereste parties to get together soon to share ideas and identify some possible actions we could take to move ahead in this area.

Hopefully, it is not too late to reconsider this issue and to begin planning for the implementation of the class size reduction program for grades 2 and 3 beginning in February 1997 or sooner so our children can benefit from increased teacher-student interaction enabled by a class size of 20:1.

Supe should apologize

This letter is written to thank our Assemblyman Tom Hannigan for supporting the plan to change the ineffectual Yolo County Transit Authority into a Yolo County Transit District.

The onus is on the Woodland supervisor who attacks the change is "creating more government." Coming from an elected "government" official, this slogan attack on a change in the structure of government to make it better is a political statement, not a substantive charge.

In the case of the plan embodied in AB 2420 (and I have read it and suggest that anyone interested in improving our broken down system read it also), it is not, as the supervisor calls it, a "bus government bill," its goal is to empower the County and its cities to be able to "construct and improve state highways, the construction, maintenance improvement and operations of local streets, roads, and highways, and the construction, improvement and operation of public transit systems" including paratransit systems.

We have been fortunate to have had Assemblyman Hannigan as our representative in Sacramento and the supervisor knows full well that while many in the county and state government may make decisions on the basis of campaign contributions and special interest, Hannigan never has.

The Woodland supervisor should apologize to Hannigan for his charge. Any public official including the Woodland supervisor who can leave office with a clean record on representation is or will be unique.

AB 2420 is a good bill and our Governor will, I am sure, sign it. A good reward for both Hannigan and Wilson will be when Yolo County, in cooperation with regional transit improvements, give them an invitation to ride the new public transit and see the end to the current freeway gridlock.

GRACE K. OHLSON
West Sacramento

College trustee

I recently filed as a candidate for the Board of Trustees of the Los Rios Community College District. This Board directs the activities of American River Community College, Sacramento City College, Consumes River Community College, and several satellite training center. I have a Ph.D. in pharmacology and a DVM degree. I teach and conduct Alzheimer's disease and heart disease research at UC Davis School of Veterinary Medicine. More than twenty years experience in college teaching and administration gives me an in-depth knowledge of California higher education and the requirements for a quality college education.

Why would a college professor and veterinarian choose to enter the world of politics to pursue this position? The answer is readily apparent. Over the last decade, the selection of educational leaders has become very political to the detriment of our educational system (e.g., consider what is occurring in the Sacramento School Board). The performance of our K-12 students on standardizes tests reflects this deterioration. Selection of educational leaders should be based on merit rather than political clout. Yet, what we will observe in the upcoming election is the selection of educational leaders based on political muscle, with little discussion of the relevant issues such as enhancing student learning, improving quality of education, increasing accessibility, improving job prospects, etc.

We have all had ample opportunity to observe the results of this politicization of the California educational system. WE are all concerned with the slow, steady erosion of the quality of education in California. Community colleges are being asked to fill the breach on both sides; to provide necessary remedial education to poorly prepared K-12 graduates and to supply California with well-educated graduates, prepared to enter a productive career or continue their education. At the same time, the community college system has experienced static or shrinking resources to accomplish this important task. In order to stop and reverse this downward slide, competent leadership experienced in higher education is required. Amazingly, the current LRCCD Board, charged with the responsibility to meet this daunting challenge, does not have a single member who is an experienced college educator.

I am an educator, not a politician. This will be the only political position I will seek. I possess essential instruction experience and knowledge to provide a necessary perspective on the challenges facing the Los Rios District. My focus will be to put students first and to insure that they receive a quality education. It is time to put educators back into education. Anything less, is unfair to the students and ultimately, the taxpayers, who pay the bills.

who are directly accountable to you, the constituents), that Assemblyman Hannigan is somehow forcing this on us (not true, he simply acted, as a good representative should, to implement what his constituents wanted), that support has been iffy at best (not true, when the legislation was introduced all four cities and the county were unanimous in their support), and finally, that this is a "bus government" (this one really misses the mark, since the district is not, and never has been, about buses and transit).

The district is just a tool, a mechanism, for us to use to address the issues we now have, and we will have in the future with the whole transportation system. You only have to drive around the county to see the problem, and believe me, unless we start now, it will get worse. It is a lot better to fix the problems now, while we can, than to wait and try to fix them later, when the costs have escalated and the problems seem insurmountable. It is also gratifying to see that one Supervisor has acknowledged, as part of the county's budget development process, that road funding is an issue. This very issue was one of the motivator of that group of citizens three years ago to suggest reorganization of the Transit Authority. The difference between the district and the current organization is like the difference between a computer and a calculator -- both do about the same job, but the more modern form does the job better and has the capacity to expand to meet new needs.

Even more importantly, the district is a first step at cooperation at the county level on an issue of importance to all the residents. It has not been easy to forge partnerships and develop the trust needed to take the risk to support change. I don't know how anyone can expect us to cooperate at the regional level on even more contentious issues we can learn to do it at this level on one issue. Knowing all the effort and hope that has gotten us this far, I can only appeal to your good sense to realize that the forces opposing the district have another agenda, and that targeting the effort to form the district does a disservice to all the county residents.

While I am sorry that two jurisdictions recently rescinded their support (by split votes), I should point out that the three remaining jurisdictions, which represent nearly 70 percent of the county's population, still support the district. Whether or not a district is formed it is my hope that all jurisdictions in Yolo County can meet in the near future and begin to address the many transportation problems that confront us.

I hope this has clarified concerns. I would be happy to send a copy of the bill to anyone who wants to read for themself and make up their own mind if the district makes sense or not. We have written the bill in the clearest language possible and put everything up front that the district can, and more importantly, cannot do. Letters supporting the district can be sent to the Governor at: Governor Wilson, State Capitol, Sacramento, CA, 95814.

Planning award to W.S.

The City of West Sacramento has announced that the Southport Framework Plan has been chosen as the winner of the 1996 California Chapter American Planning Association Award of Excellence for Comprehensive Planning - Small Jurisdiction. The award will be presented at an annual awards dinner at the Cal APA annual conference in Palm Springs on October 4. The plan will be nominated by the State organization for consideration in the National APA Awards program early next year.

The Southport Framework Plan covers the southern half of the City of West Sacramento, an area of 7,000 acres. The plan projects the development of over 14,000 additional housing units and 16,000 new employment opportunities in Southport over a 20-year buildout period. The plan emphasizes a series of villages along a loop arterial parkway circling Southport.

The plan was prepared in 1991 and 1992 and adopted in 1995 after environmental review. The preparation of the plan included a design competition between four of the best-known urban planners in the nation. Andres Duany (DPZ), Peter Calthorpe, Henry Skokowski (Urban Design Studios) and Steve Kellenberg (PBR) headed design teams that prepared alternative preliminary plans during a one-week design charette. The winner of the competition, PBR, then prepared a final plan with community input.

Several subdivisions consistent with the plan have been approved. Development is expected to begin in 1997 with completion of the Daniel C. Palamidessi Bridge, which provides a second access point to Southport. Construction of the bridge is underway.

She holds credentials in pupil personnel-basic with school psychology authorizations and professional administrative services.

As chief administrator of the SELPA, Burness will be responsible for the coordination of special education services within the county. The SELPA director provides support and long-range direction to local school districts. She will report directly to the Yolo County Superintendents' Council.

the gymnasium and swimming pool. Our buildings may be 40 years old, but we are determined to make our campus a place our students can be proud of and River City High a school they will want to attend."

When asked what he thought about the addition of another vice principal to the RCHS staff, Whittemore said, "I think it's very advantageous for a high school this size to have two V.P.s. Not only will it help in the area of discipline, but it will also allow us to focus more of our time and attention on attendance. Last year we were able to drop our absenteeism rate by 54 percent and our goal is to continue that very exciting trend. Nothing is more important than making sure as many of our kids are in class as possible."

"The thing I already notice about this year," said Dawn Leventon, a long time RCHS counselor who has been hard at work for the past two weeks on student schedules and class placements, "is that everyone seems to be eager to get back to work. I think the steady improvement over the last few years has helped everyone's attitude -- teachers and students alike. When kids show more interest in their studies, teachers enjoy teaching more. One feeds off the other and we're all hoping for another year like last year, when so many of our students did so well."

Dr. White added, "the Class of 2000 is going to be taking us into the next century and I think all of us are looking forward to being part of that adventure. And it just so happens that River City High School is a great place to work and learn. There, the secret's out!"
